From the Cape of Good Hope.

Six Native Servants.

The Lady Borringdon touched at the Cape. Previously to her departure a vessel arrived with advices, from Europe to the 17th of December, and we deem it our duty to communicate the intelligence she brought which as far as it affects one of the powers of Europe, is most interesting.

A Revolution had taken place in Spain and the King obliged to quit his capital and to fly to Valadolid. That this spirit will be confined to the limits of that unfortunate monarchy is not to be expected. The withdrawing of the Army of occupation, from France leaves that field open to that numerous class of Politicians, who are adverse to the Bourbon dynasty; and we cannot calcutate on the tranquillity of that country.

The Duke of York, has resigned the command of the Army, and has been appointed to the charge of the Kings person, with a reduced establishment of 73,000 £ a year.

The Duke of Kent, has succeeded to the command of the Army.

The Duke of Wellington has been appointed Master General of the Ordnance.

Lord Ellenborough is dead.

A considerable body of Germans, had embarked for South America, as also a number of English Officers; the Patriot cause in that quarter most triumphant.

The Hannah, had touched at the Cape, and proceeded, on her way to England all well.

The Loyalty, and Westmoreland, left the Cape, for this place previous to the arrival of the Lady Borringdon.
